

What is your constant thread stitched through your day-to-day?

Posted on April 16,2018 by nmcreatrix

This is a very interesting question, asked on the interwebs. In the past, it would have been low grade dread... pre-retirement of course. Post retirement, it would have to be art. I have been able to just about what I want when I want since I have retired, and I have enjoyed all of that thouroughly. I sat down today and looked through all my digital collages (a daily practice with a FB group that I have been doing for several years, though it seems like forever! I do some amazing things, and the occasional ringer! But so far I have always realized that it is a ringer, and usually replace it. Only occasionally have I let the occasional ringer through, and then regret it every time that I see that particular piece. Oh well... [caption id="attachment_6423" align="aligncenter" width="300"] view from our hotel room in London, April 2016. Gold boat to the right is the Queen's...[/caption]

Posted in:Uncategorized || With 0 comments