

Selective Senility...

Posted on February 28,2018 by nmcreatrix

I guess that I have always suffered "Selective Senility". This is a quote from Dian Greisl of Silver Disobedience and you can see the entire post HERE

Of course I've been screwed many times & always by someone I really liked at first, otherwise I'd have protected myself better. Friends & co-workers often remind me of those times. But the irony is, I have what I can only label "Selective Senility." Like all of us, while we could collect an arsenal of reasons for bitterness, I genuinely don't remember most negative incidents. I made the decision that certain things were just not worth remembering. It's like our heads have only X-number of storage compartments: So, why would we want to fill them with junk?"

Posted in:Uncategorized || With 0 comments