

My Sunday routine

Posted on April 08,2018 by admin

My Sunday routine has varied very little for the last 30 years... or however long CBS Sunday Morning has been on the air. I started watching it when Charles Kuralt was the host and drove around in an RV. At that point, my life did not include any church services on Sunday morning, and I had to make accomodation when I started attending the Unitarian Universalist church in Houston in 1998. Luckily I lived close enough to the church that I could watch the all but the last 10-12 minutes of the show and still be almost on time for church! 2017 was a tough year for me, and so I have changed my routine again, but expanded not contracted it. I have been unable to get the gumption to attend church after our beloved minister retired last year. So now my routine has allowed me to watch both CBS Sunday Morning and CBS Face the Nation. No political rant here... I am not set in my ways {well...} but I do enjoy CBS Sunday Morning. Although I am still adjusting to the new host {Jane Pauley}.

Posted in:Uncategorized || With 4 comments